Vislink News & Entertainment supplies an ADVENT driveaway satellite antenna to Al Hurriya TV

Al Hurriya gears up with new equipment to cover the forthcoming elections in Iraq

Vislink News & Entertainment has supplied an ADVENT Newswift vehicle-mounted antenna to the Al Hurriya TV channel, to cover the forthcoming elections in Iraq.

The system, which has already been delivered, comprises a 1.2 metre antenna for Ku band, complete with antenna controller, automatic satellite acquisition and built in redundancy.

The system is being supplied through broadcast systems integrator AV Solutions, a leading supplier of broadcast technology in the Middle East. AV Solutions will complete the systems design and integration and supply the final SNG to the customer.

Zaid Wattar, General Manager of AV Solutions says: "We selected ADVENT for its solid engineering and workable design. This new antenna will be an invaluable addition to Al Hurriya's OB fleet during the coming months."

Mather Al Ali, Vislink's General Manager for the Middle East and North Africa says:

"The Advent 1.2m FlyDrive continues to be a popular option for many regional broadcasters requiring a portable FlyAway system in addition to having the flexibility to transform the same system into a temporary DriveAway system."

The Iraqi elections originally timed for January this year have been delayed until the spring.
